

Hello,

Thank you for listening to "Traphouse Rock."
I speak for the whole band when I say we really appreciate your support. We would like you to share this music and let us know what you think.

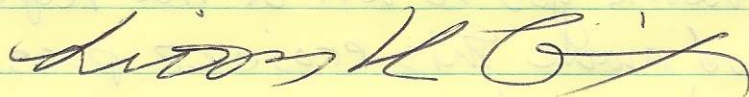

The written word is in such a hyperbolic state these days, with all the extra letters and punctuation to show excitement, honest words and feelings sometimes seem to ~~lose~~ lack luster. The truth is I love you, and I'm humbled by the journey this band has been given so far, and the time you have given to listen to a bunch of kids' music from Chicago.

Speaking of our sweet home, Chicago, The City of Wind, thank you to all of the people who got us here and made this project possible. Thanks to our friends and our family. When we get flustered and overwhelmed, the love received from those around us is precious. Thank you to all the venues we've played in Chicago and across the country for giving us some of the best times of our lives and making us all better musicians, to Jeff Tweedy for giving us a Sound and direction, for the project, to Mario C, helping us bring the whole project together. Thanks to the engineers for capturing the music we made in creative and unique ways and to our team for making all of our lives so much easier, to our fans for allowing us to live our dream. Finally, we would like to thank The Trap for being the home of our music. TrapHouse Rock (two words, not three) in its truest form will ~~never~~ forever live within those four small walls. Thank you to everyone else I haven't mentioned but we are forever indebted to. We love you. Enjoy the album, and I hope to see you in your city.

Thank you,

Liam Kazar Cunningham
